BREVITIES.

—Our faith in human nature has been restored.—Susan B. says she didn't.

—In San Francisco the courts are trying to decide whether a woman has the right to tend bar in her own saloon.

—A man was sent to the gallows in the Vicksburg jail, and the state is without a superintendent of education.

—An Ohio manufacturing firm starts with the firm conviction that glass is the best possible material for carpenter's tools.

—The Hungarian government has issued a special decree permitting the manifestation of dissaparition by means of hissing the opera.

—"I've been sent to a Mississippi bootman, recently, when first the constabule upon his sight, "Suckles I've had before, and now the stars have got 'till on 'em. I'm a dead man!"

—"Well, Bridget, if I exage, you, I want you to stay at home whenever I wish to go out." "Well, mam, I have no other place to go, you do, the same when I wish to go out."

—Says John Paul: "It is very hard to be a good christian when one has a weak digestion, and I sometimes fancy that a change of stomach would benefit the morbid sinner almost much as a change of heart."

A Saratoga letter says that on the last day of the races a New York lady of higher rank bet a large sum, came home to the hotel, and did the same thing that men do under like circumstances. What's that?

—J. C. Stanton has taken possession of the Alabama & Chattanooga railroad, as trustee of the first mortgage bond holders, and the order made by a United States Commissioner.

—Lord Dunmore, the last royal governor of Virginia, had a daughter born in the colony not long before he left, whom he named in honor of the colony, Virginia, and who is still living in England, at the advanced age of ninety-nine or one hundred.

—The Nevada News says: "Actors in Silver Dell opera house don't much object to being rowed and flogged and chucked at them, but when a Chinaman comes into the gallery and fires his pistol into the dragon, it is time to get out of her."

—A Brooklyn man, known to the Argus, being caught in a shower in Chicago, took advantage of the first shelter he could find, and was greatly astonished when a native female accosted him with the remark that she'd sharpen him with a hair-pin if he didn't get out of her shower."

—One of the stalks of Washington market, New York, the other day, displayed a card which read: "We have no more sausages for sale." Directly under the advertisement some wag had written: "Dog cheap." The proprietor of the stall said he never knew such a dull day in the sausages trade.

—In the charming poems of Mrs. Goss we are told how once upon a time "two blind men went to see two crickets run a race." In Fayette county, Iowa, something equally remarkable is going on, that can't be out of the office of recorder, there being four legs between the two of them having a leg apiece and the third no leg at all.

—This is the way the people who live on the coast of Maine describe their weather: "We blind men went to see two crickets run a race."

—In Fayette county, Iowa, something equally remarkable is going on, that can't be out of the office of recorder, there being four legs between the two of them having a leg apiece and the third no leg at all.

—A Kansas lady writing of a grasshopper visitation in Marion county said: "Next day a grasshopper hopped like a pugilist, and took the top of a head of vegetables, then the root, leaving a hole in the ground. In the absence of other fruit, he had been counting greatly on the peaches; the trees are striped, only the stones left hanging on by the stems."

—The official return of the names and callings of the 5,244 communists who had arrived in New Caledonia, on the 1st of January last, may perhaps furnish material for speculation on the connection of particular occupations with revolutionary organizations. In Missouri a vote of 139 1/2 out of a total of 318. The major fraction of 163 nominated Mr. C. son for congress in an Indianapolis convention, much to the grief of a majority of its members. But a county convention "out west" beat them all when it nominated a man by a vote of 60 80-266 out of 190 votes.

—We have received a dispatch from Cobb county stating that at a meeting there yesterday, Hon. W. D. Anderson and Mr. G. H. Lindley had been found for the legislature; Howell for the Senate, and Felton for Congress. We are very sorry if any Democrats have endorsed an independent candidate. Dr. Felton made a speech.

—We must confess that the retirement of Col. Kibbee from the congressional seat affords us much pleasure, for the State needs him in the State Senate, which he much graces.

—A MOVEMENT is on foot in Tennessee to secure the sanction of the next legislature to the removal of the remains of Andrew Jackson, together with those of his wife, from their resting place at the "Hermitage" to the northern tier of the capitol at Nashville. It is proposed to erect a mausoleum over them, and an appropriation will be urged at the next session of the legislature.

CIVIL LIBERTIES.

The Great Radical Pow-Wow.

Zack Chandler, who is the chairman of the republican congressional committee, seems to devote his whole time to the regulation of southern affairs. It is pretty well established that he was the prime mover in the carpet-bag plot of the continued growth of American manufacturers, but he believes that the celebrity with which every improved process and labor-saving machinery is brought into general use, will soon make our manufacturers formidable competitors in foreign markets. Since 1860 cotton manufacturers have increased thirty per cent. in this country, and the writer says that our cotton mills are now ample to supply the home market and compete abroad. He concludes his report by the remark that the question of the future for England is, "When will the United States be likely to compete in European markets?" and he answers himself thus: "I am disposed to think that with a little reduction in the cost of production, and much as American standards are better than ours, the American standard, for instance, would compete in Manchester, at the very doors of our manufacturers, with English sheetings."

But while the Journal of Commerce sees in this flattering report evidence that the scepter of trade is passing slowly but surely from the eastern to the western shores of the Atlantic, the Bulletin—Boston's other commercial journal—discovered breakers ahead in the probable expansion of cotton manufacturers in the south. It discusses the question bravely, however, and after citing several analogous cases, comes to the conclusion that in time, as things now look, the production of the coarser goods will be more and more left to the south, while the New England spinners and weavers will devote themselves to the production of fabrics "in which the cost of the raw material bears a small portion to the value of the completed product." It says the Bulletin, New England has anything to fear from competition from the south, the fact that the cotton states possess singular advantages for manufacturing cotton grades of certain grades, is a fact which cannot be worked out of sight.

In other words, while the British official report locates the cotton manufacturers of the future in this country the Bulletin assigns to the south the production of yarns and the coarser kinds of cotton, leaving the Lowell and Lawrence of the north to produce the finer kinds of goods. If the cotton grown in the south could be shipped away in the shape of yarns, it would double our wealth in ten years, and if we can go still farther, and manufacture the coarser goods, it is all perhaps that we should aspire to—at least, until we possess more accumulated wealth. It is a very grave question whether every mill in the south—certainly every new mill—should not be devoted to spinning; whether it is not the best policy, at present, to invest all in spindles and nothing in looms. With a limited capital it is not well to be too grasping, to hastily enter into competition with abundant resources and ample experience. The production of yarns and coarser goods is scope enough for the present, and we can afford to temporarily leave the rest to the older factories, of the country.

The Jurisdiction of the City Court.

The Supreme Court yesterday rendered a decision of more than usual interest to the citizens of this county, as to the jurisdiction of our City Court. The case in which this decision occurred is The State vs. J. F. Porter, published in another column. Porter, it will be remembered, was a constable in the 1234th district of this county, and was convicted before the trial of the 1234th district, that shall appoint two freeholders, and the owner or
